LOCAL JOTTINGS

Has the Tobacco Fund slipped your memory?

Please save all your old magazines for the "boys in khaki".

BORN—To Mr and Mrs W. C. Tucker, on Sunday Aug. 20th a daughter.

The Patriotic Society met at the name of Mrs VanTighem on Tuesday.

Mrs Ashley r. turned from Colordao on Thur day where she has been visiting her daughter.

There was a celebration of Communion at the Methodist Church on Sunday evening.

We may have an interesting announcement for you next week regarding waste papers.

The Maple Leaf Hotel will open its dining room to the public the end of the week.

Four of our local dance enthusiasts attended the dance held at Gleichen on Wednesday last.

Mr W. Ross, accountant in the Bank of Commerce, Athabasca, is visiting with Mr J. McCall.

Mr and Mrs Earl Beck are occupying the residence on Third Street lately vacated by Mr and Mrs MacDonald.

Judging by the loads of binder twine which have been brought out from town, there will be something doing in the harvest fields.

The Methodist Ladies Aid will meet at the home of Mrs W. G. Way on Thursday afternoon at 2:30. All members are requested to attend.

Mrs Booth, who went some few weeks ago to the Mayo Hospital, Rochester, Minn., to undergo an operation, is now able to be around in a wheel chair and is progressing favorably.

An effort is being made to bring the Town Band back into life. Will those interested in same please communicate with W. Saunders, Standard Office.

R. H. Anderson and H. H. Johnson were visitors to Langdon on Sunday. (A number of our young "braves" have been taking these Sunday trips. What's the idea?)

The weather during the past week has caused a holdup in the tennis tournament. We hope, however, to be able to give a report of this week's games, in our next issue.

Don't forget the dance in the Opera House on Friday evening in aid of the Patriotic Fund. Everybody should turn out and assist this worthy cause.

Captain L. J. Main, 211 Batt. American Legion was down for the week end. He has been away recruiting around Edmonton the past two weeks and reported that he succeeded in getting no recruits in Trofield. The Cap is sure there when it comes to recruiting.

Saturday was a busy day for the merchants of the town. The Auction Sale was the attraction and the streets were thronged with people. It seemed like old times to see them coming in and out of the Maple Leaf, but the knowledge that 2 per cent was the only drink available, did not cause any alarm.

Mr H. B. Smith, who has been managing the C.P.R. farm for some time past is leaving this week for Winnipeg, where he will take up a position in the grain department of the North-West Farmer. His position will be taken by Mr S. M. Walker who has been acting as foreman.

Yours sincerely,
JOHN MACKENZIE

A Word from the Chief

No 18308, "B" Coy, 89th Batt., C.E.F.

Army P.O., London, Eng.

Dear Charles,

I am writing you this to let you know that we are still in England, though how long it will be before we move over is difficult to say. We have had a busy time learning the ways of the British Army and other forces of the "art destructive".

The weather has been very good the past few weeks, the only complaint is that it is rather warm for marching with full equipment. It was not for the soldiers' sakes and the darkening of the streets at night we would not know that we were there, but for the sake of the horses. The people here are putting up a great effort, both in doing it quickly and steadily, without a great deal of surface show, and in a way that means business.

Two weeks ago I had a six days pass and paid a visit to my parents.

Afterwards, besides visiting my parents at Bury, Lancashire, I had a very nice holiday.

I would like to write you a little article regarding our arm experiments, but we have to be careful regarding what is written for publication, and moreover I have been kept very busy ever since I came here. However, I will try to send something soon, to let the people know what we are getting on. We will probably be ready to go again when you get this. Best regards to you all.

Yours truly,

Special Notice.

Strathmore Auction Mart Co. Ltd.

At a meeting of the directors it was decided to hold the next sale on Saturday Sept 3rd and at that sale all succeeding sales no commission will be charged on any HORSES, CATTLE, GOATS or SHEEP that are not sold.

Now to all who have a successful sale, as well as the Company, we must have encouragement in the fact that these sales gives you necessary time to get out posters and advertising to sell buyers from other districts, you have no risk to run of any loss and your directors hope that you will co-operate with them in making Strathmore a good centre for the disposal of your stock. Let us hope that a keen judge of the value of all kinds of stock and he hopes that now the entrance fee is knocked off, that you will all rate your stock highly and hope that we can always have a big crowd in Strathmore the last Saturday of the month.

Mr W. E. Bishop, G. Gatenby, L. B. Lodmell, W. G. Way and the Painting Oil, Telluride, and the many other horse, cattle, sheep and hogs now at the Strathmore Auction Mart Co.

Signed on behalf of the Board

Patriotic Ball

In connection with the Patriotic Ball on Friday evening we hope that as many of the citizens of Strathmore and district as possible will come. With the exception of the janitor and the lighting expenses the whole proceeds will be given to the Patriotic Fund.

Everyone is welcome. Everybody come—or if you can't, send a dollar and make the contribution to the fund as large as possible.

The list of articles for which ribbons prizes will be awarded at the County Fair on October 19th will be published in next issue.

BUY AN IRRIGATED FARM

FROM THE CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY

BECAUSE—

Irrigation makes the farmer independent of rainfall, and insures good crops, not occasionally, but EVERY YEAR. Irrigation is a power plant, which insures best returns in dairying and mixed farming.

Irrigation is an intensive farming and close settlement, with all the advantages of a densely populated agricultural community.

Irrigation is the Canadian Pacific Railway Irrigation Block is no longer an experiment, the year 1914 having absolutely demonstrated its success.

You can buy irrigated land from the Canadian Pacific Railway at a low price, and the privilege of a loan of $200 for improvements (or second mortgage); no principal payment at the end of first or second mortgage.

This plan also liberally offers in supplying stock in approved instances.

FALL COATS THE ACME OF SMARTNESS

AT THIS time every woman is keenly interested in the coming styles for fall. Altho there are many questions not yet settled, there is every reason to believe that the coat for fall will be a long one, whether it belongs to a suit or is a separate and independent affair. On the page are a few models which I trust will唤起 the woman's desire to wrap and which will help the woman to decide on an artistic, becoming and satisfactory style.

An ecclesiastic effect is noticeable in the coat of blue velvet. The chasuble back and panel front are outlined with four rows of blue silk and silver embroidery. The collar is outlined with the pocket opening. The high collar, made to be worn either open or closed, is of the same blue velvet with gray, and fastens in front with two tabs and a button at each side of the neck. When open, the collar spreads in the wide, fan-shaped Mississipi form. The sleeve is set in the normal shoulder line and is very ample at the wrist. The coat is belted across the front at a slightly low waistline.

Extreme fullness is still the keynote of wraps. In the wrap cut circular this feature is very much emphasized. Deep red velvet is the material used for the coat, and Belgian hare gives a satisfying touch of the essential fur. The yoke at the back is most interesting, being in two sections that turn up to form a high, turn-over collar. The sleeves are in raglan form. Two fastenings, one at the neck and one at the hip, hold the garment together. Handsome ornaments made of red silk cord and rows of stitching are additional touches which add to the richness of the coat.

The tan coat belongs to a suit and includes the belt and trousers for the early fall suite. The material is broadcloth to a suit and the fur is seal. Pockets continue to be a great favor. They are here placed in the case of the skin of the coat and are outlined in fur. The long sleeves show an interesting mounting, being set in at the shoulder, the tab extending from the cloth belt, cut in such a way with the front, is trimmed with a fur band. The full skin has a wide band of fur, which is run thru slashes in the cloth.

The Japanese collar is a favorite finish for the fall evening wear. Changeable in color, the material is chosen for the wrap showing this note. It is lined with blue chiffon and embroidered with gold beads at the hem, and, usually enough, the lining hangs loose from the wrap. The high standing collar, springing from a low rounded neck line, is made of brown velvet and is lined with chiffon. The sleeves are unusual, being formed by a godet insertion at the sides. The ornaments appearing on the collar are of taffeta and are headed in gold and white. A successful use of rose-colored fringe and gold beads is seen on the ornaments and the collar ends in the same sleeves. From this group you can make a selection for morning, noon or night and walk into the new season with a feeling that you have made the right choice.

FLORENCE WARDEN

WARD, LOCK & CO. LIMITED
London, Montreal, and Toronto

Altogether a man of singularly amiable manners, and Mabel was also shrewd enough to feel interested and curious. Where did he come from? What had he been doing there?

"There you are!" cried he, as after much talking and politeness, he began reading of obtrusive articles of furniture, "You've got air, at any rate. But as to the freshness of it, that's another question. You're ever here in this brightened hole. I suppose you're here to stay long enough to make him when he's away?"

He was standing back, smiling, and whistling a tune, and holding a colored pocket handkerchief. Mabel was silent.

"Do you call London a brightened hole?" she said in a dry voice.

"More or less," said he. "Oh! said she, and said no more.

It was a short drop from the long conversation with a stranger, and besides, she had nothing to say. Her mind was full of thoughts from similar embarrassments. At last, however, she said, "I'm along here when they were eaten, and to smile at her as he did so. At last he faded.

Where I come from there are trees, and in this house, and a climate like heaven."

"Indeed."

"Yes, and after eight years away from England, what you get here in the way of a climate seems poor stuff."

"Yes, I suppose so."

"Well, I suppose, Good Lord, I'd forgotten how wretched the people look. What a lot of grimy loafers you see in the streets, and the like of hard drivers of a life there."

Mabel was interested. It seemed odd to her that he had never mentioned before should his ways to dash into conversation about his view of what she said. She knew that he was returning to him, but as he was frank, she took courage and was frank also.

"Well, I suppose, come to think of it, if you don't like it?" she asked innocently.

He seemed taken aback by her question, and the way in which he looked at her made her feel confused, so that she burst out laughing.

"Well," he said, "that's a fair enough answer, but if it would bore you to hear me, I won't have to be a lone one. In fact, there's a few more grumps."

"Oh, I didn't mean—"

"I suppose I say that I was delighted to find that you were still here, and I was even interested enough in me to ask a few questions."

"Oh, you don't think—"

"I'd like to think that you wanted to know where I was, and tell you all about it, cutting her short in the most good-natured manner, and plunging into a startling explanation.

"Look here, I went away from England, and I went away in the way I was in the way. And I've come back because I wanted to see you again, and for that reason I took for granted that I was not of the way. That is, my kind friends were not of the way."

"What do you think of that?"

"I'll tell you. When I came back to show them that you were alive," said Mabel, getting more at home, "they said, 'We're glad to have you to be a lone one. In fact, there's a few more grumps.'

"They think I don't mean—"

"I'm afraid not, and for a shake of the head, 'They've sent an invitation to meet me today here, to put me off.'"

"Yes, not very cheerful after eight years' absence, is it? However, I suppose you'll be glad to give me a savage—absolutely a savage."

At the moment there was heard a sharp knock on the outer door of the office. Mabel, who was holding the handle of the door as he was going to retire, although he could not bring himself to it, withdrew his hand and closed the door.

Then, heard the voice of the clerk a moment later, saying: "Someone to see you, sir."

And then, heard the bearded stranger say, curtly: "How do you do?"

Another voice replied, in tones too low for her to hear more than a word or two, "I'm sorry, but I must be excused."

Then, heard a pause, the clerk recited, and then the voice of the new-comer, raised so that she could hear him, "I am sorry, but I am afraid I could go and get his luncheon."

And during the pause that followed Mabel heard the click go out, shutters were fully unfastened, and Mabel felt very uncomfortable. Although the bearded stranger was aware of her presence in the immediate neighborhood, she did not like being so near, for there was something in the tones of the two men, muffled as their voices were, that caused her to shrink into the two rooms, which convinced her that the interview between them was going on.

Certainly the fair-haired man, who had been in the office, and had adjourned room, could adjust his tones to the occasion. But the fact that he was not very apt on impulse or on instinct, was evident.

And here was she, shut in so near that, although they could not see her, they could not raise their voices, either.

Should she walk boldly out through the adjoining room and re-enter the session? But the fact that she was not very apt on impulse or on instinct, was evident.

"There you are!" cried he, as after much talking and politeness, he began reading of obtrusive articles of furniture, "You've got air, at any rate. But as to the freshness of it, that's another question. You're ever here in this brightened hole. I suppose you'll be glad to know when he's away?"

The Life of the Gun

Freson Sooner or Later Inspires the Accuracy of Fire.

The life of a gun depends upon the progress of erosion, which sooner or later, if not checked, will result in fire. Erosion is caused by the action of the explosive gases, heat, pressure, and temperature, all of which are interrelated.

After the gun has been fired, the heat expands and becomes hot. Upon cooling, it contracts, which causes minute cracks, which grow larger with each successive firing. These cracks form passageways for more hot gas, and eventually lead to the gun's destruction.

The inner surface of the gun becomes so enlarged that it allows the gases to escape, and the gun loses its accuracy.

Those who did not fully understand the gun's construction, and who believed that the gun's life was over, were brought to Canada, and while there, were taught the art of gunnery.

Now, the gun's life is over, and the gun is useless.

After Coming Into Contact With Britain's New Army, Are Glad to Be Made Prisoners.

Philip Gibbs, of the London Daily Chronicle, writes from the front that he has been captured by the British Guards, said: A large number of prisoners were taken, and many were ill-treated, so the sentence, threatened by the Germans, was carried out.

After the war, the British Guards eventually became very much attached to the enemy, whose regiment, as well as the French, was highly regarded.

The third Prussian Guards division, which had been so utterly beaten by the British, was given to the French.

Jack, the Famous Pet of the Guards, Is Honored.

One of the most famous regiments that ever lived was "Jack," who was a dog that had been captured by the British army in France.

Jack was on the ground at St. James' Palace, and was a sentry outside St. James' Palace.

Jack was the famous pet of the Guards, and was highly regarded.

After coming into contact with the British Guards, Jack was made a prisoner.

Holland's Help To Belgians

Excellent Work Being Done in Looking After Refugees.

United Nations certifying location upon the world. In addition to the sum of $5,000,000 supplied Belgian refugees by the United Nations, which has been contributed by the Dutch government, two million dollars have been voted by the Senate and unless peace comes soon one million more will be voted.

The Belgian government made an offer of reimbursement which Holland accepted.

Camps, under control of the government, are scattered throughout the country, camps, schools and post offices.

The refugees are not compelled to work, but a small wage is offered and many are employed in constructing new wooden houses which can be sold after the war.

Excellent educational facilities are offered. Under the direction of the Dutch-Belgian commission 50 per cent of the children are in school with 4,500 scholars, certified Belgian teachers being employed.

Holland is playing the part of a real neutral—a noble humanitarian part, saving the women and refugee holocaust befalling all her neighbors.

Woman is another forcible argument for woman's rule—Cleopatra.

Unhappy Germany.

Germany is not without concern of itself, but it is painfully conscious of the fact that in wars of expansion it has always lost. Will it win if the contest is prolonged? Germany and her allies number 100,000,000. They are not the ones who fear their number of white men, to say nothing of their black ones, will come from the brown and the black. They hope to gain a temporary victory.

They have spent the military capital they had in the last war.

They still want to believe that on the defense they will be able to hold back the British and Americans.

They are realistic enough to know that the result of a protracted war will be a double loss arising spontaneously in German minds rather than those of their enemies.

The Government is seeking to ally Germany and the Habsburgs.

Germany is more—New Globe.

King George's Memory.

King George's wonderful memory for faces was again demonstrated on a trip through Europe. Two years before a visit to the same hospital he talked about his son, King Edward, and at the time he recognized the same man.

You may have heard him say that said the Queen, "Majority, you were in that bed over there."

"Yes, I'm the other leg this time."

Ancient Armor Revived.

French polyps may soon find in ancient armor. The success of the new method has started a movement in Paris to protect the chest, cheeks, shoulder and neck from the bullets of in time of war each Russian regiment is formed of 4,000 soldiers. One regiment after a year of war had already had 30,000 men.

English Stock Breeding and the War.

It is now known that pure-bred stock is still being sent to all parts of the world. A shipment from an English herd to a Russian farm in Siberia has just arrived. From a French herd to a Russian farm in South Africa a short time ago has obtained the medal for the best antelope.

A shipment of Oxford rams to Australia has been followed by a similar one to New Zealand.

Farmers and Stock Breeders.

There are facts to be taken into account that English breeders are already preparing to meet the demand for stock that is expected to follow after the war. The French demand for breeding stock is so great that the market is large.

French authorities say that at least 100,000 cattle will be needed to supply the market. This will be a large extension of the area of pasture land in France, and that is increased. There is little doubt, says Dr. Ladd's, that a demand for breeding stock will produce a distinct improvement in the quality of the cattle.

World's Potato Crop

Germany Leads Total Yield for Year of 1914.

The world's potato crop in 1914 covered 30,000,000 acres, giving yield of 4,275,000,000 bushels.

Of this Russia had 8,367,000, Poland 6,270,000, Germany 5,600,000, and 1,677,000 bushels, against less than one billion for Russia. France had 4,000,000,000, the United States 405,000,000, Canada 300,000,000, Australia 247,000,000, Great Britain 187,000,000, and Holland fourth with 222,000,000.

Canada was 180, and for the United States, which produces with over one-third of the world's potato crop, the yield was 15,500,000 bushels.

Practically every part of this country is involved in the manufacture of starch.

The cost of treatment, labor and materials will normally be less than five cents a bushel.

We have no other investment than the money used in the manufacture of starch output for 1914-15 being 35,500,000 bushels.

GOOD DIGESTION A SOURCE OF HEALTH

When the Stomach Is Out of Order the Whole System Suffers.

Indigestion is one of the most dangerous maladies afflicting mankind. When the stomach is unable to digest food, the body cannot receive the necessary energy to do its work. Severe pains after eating, heart, sick, headache, and often diarrhea, follow, though the sufferer digests too frequently all sorts of food.

One of the most effective ways to combat indigestion is to drink a glass of milk.

A good way to do this is to drink a glass of milk in a grain field and count all the stalks of grain within a square foot.

If one does not care to count stalks of grain, then take a glass of milk and count the number of heads and never let them be heading out and actually counting them in a given area.
